RFHS Annual Dinner Speaker
Gordon Chavis as Jack Slade

Gordon Chavis started his show business career at age 16, working as a radio announcer. After three years of moving around from one middle market station to another, he decided to become an actor, figuring that would be more rewarding than sitting alone in a glass booth making wisecracks and writing commercial copy for local car dealerships. Chavis got his Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in acting in 1989, from the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. While still in college, he started his own theater company, Vox Humana, and staged three plays he wrote in L.A. area theaters. His play, “L80 BLU,” won the Donald Davis playwrights award.

After graduation, Mr. Chavis, like most young actors in Los Angeles, set about trying to build a career in movies and television. His writing ability netted him a few screenwriting gigs, and he found critical praise for his acting in the portrayal of a troubled musician-cum-activist, opposite Felton Perry, in the stage play, “Killin’ Time,” but the good, solid movie and television roles proved elusive.

In 1992, Gordon became disenchanted with the politics and process of Hollywood and quit acting to focus on writing short stories and essays. He resumed his childhood passion for drawing and found a market for his illustrations. He also began writing copy for the internet.

In 2008, Gordon Chavis and his wife, Haydee, moved from Los Angeles to Virginia Dale on the Northern border of Colorado, to live on a family ranch that was left vacant after the deaths of Gordon’s father and brother. The Chavis’s now raise horses and dairy goats, and make delicious artisan cheese.

The Virginia Dale Community Club, an organization that maintains the historic stage coach station beside US 287, learned of Gordon’s background in theater and asked if he would consider portraying Joseph A. Slade, the notorious stage coach operator who built the Virginia Dale Stage Station, for their Open House event in June of 2009. This one-man play based on the Life of Jack Slade, is the result of that effort.

Lately, Gordon Chavis has completed a couple of screenplays that he hopes to produce with local filmmakers, and is writing his first full-length novel. “The Life and Legend of Jack Slade” continues to be performed across Northern Colorado and Wyoming.

In 1864, after being involved in the Sand Creek Massacre, George Pingree left the military and traveled to Northern Colorado in search of trees to log for railroad ties for the transcontinental railroad. By 1868 he established a tie camp in the valley that would take his name (a USGS designation). Tie hacks worked during three seasons cutting and piling ties along the banks of the South Fork of the Cache la Poudre River. The ties were then floated down river to a point near Laporte, Colorado, where they were hauled by oxen-pulled wagons to Tie Siding, Wyoming. By the fall of 1870, the local demand for railroad ties had been filled and the tie camp closed.

In the late 1890s, brothers Hugh and Charles Ramsey each established a homestead ranch and made lives for themselves in the valley. Frank Koenig, a Ramsey family friend, courted Hugh’s daughter, Hazel, and the two were married in 1913. The couple raised their family in the valley while maintaining a working homestead ranch. The Koenig property was sold to Colorado State University in 1972. Restoration projects, funded by grants from the Colorado Historical Society, have helped to preserve many of the original buildings on the homestead property as an illustration of life in pioneer times. The homestead ranch now houses the Mountain Campus Museum.

Would you like to be a part of local history?
If you have or live in a “historical building” in the area, one which was built before 1950, the Red Feather Historical Society would like to include it in our Historic Site project. We will provide a sign to identify your historic site. For more info go to our website http://redfeatherhistoricalsociety.org or contact info@redfeatherhistoricalsociety.org

Livermore History
In 1871 the ranch was homesteaded by two brothers, Horace and Charles Emerson. They first bought cattle, built an irrigation ditch with the cooperation of their neighbors and planted trees. Eventually they then married and built homes along the ditch (picture on top right). They bought other ranches. Horace’s daughter Dorothy married a Sackett and they lived in the house originally built for her father. It burned in 1933 so they built a low brick house with a red roof which still stands today and can be seen through the trees. The Hansens bought the ranch in 1940. They hired Lowell Cope as the ranch manager. Ed and his wife Marilyn moved to the ranch in 1960. Over the years they added to their holdings by acquiring the Fanning Place, Griffith Ranch and part of the Elliott Ranch. The Hansen ranch is still in operation with their sons, wives and grandchildren.

Hansen Ranch
In 1863, two miners, Adolphus Livernash and Stephan Moore, built a cabin on the North Fork of the Poudre River. The large area surrounding their claim was named Livermore from the combinations of their names. Russell Fisk purchased Moore’s claim in 1871 and built a log hotel and store. In the late 1870’s or early 1880s, Fisk built a large frame “Livermore House” as he called it, to replace the log hotel. At this time the road crossed the North Fork of the Poudre River right at the hotel site where all travel had to go through Livermore to the upper Poudre until 1920. In 1890 the road was moved to its current location 1/4 mile north of the Fisk House which caused it to go out of business. William Brelsford built the new Livermore Hotel, general store and livery barn as seen in the picture on the top left. In 1904, there was a big flood which washed out the hall and livery barn. The Livermore Hotel is now a private residence.

Trail Creek Ranch (Brackenbury)
In 1874, Clerin T. Woods moved to St. Cloud and established the Trail Creek Ranch. The Woods family moved into a large frame house in 1885. In 1938, R.A. Brackenbury purchased the ranch and it became known as the upper Brackenbury Ranch. It was part of one of the largest ranches in the area and was primarily a sheep operation. It is still in the family and has had several additions added over the years.

Carey Ranch
The Carey Ranch is located immediately to the West of the Cherokee Park Guest Ranch on the North Fork of the Poudre River. The history of this ranch dates to the early 1880's when H. E. (Herbert) Tedmon and his son, Earl, first identified a segment of the Union Pacific land grant and began a cattle ranching operation at this location. In 1884, Mr. Tedmon filed documents in the Larimer County land records that he had built dams on the river to divert water to irrigate his hay meadows. The family remained in title to these properties until 1911. The Carey Ranch was established in 1947 when it was purchased by Earl K. and Winifred Carey. It has remained in continuous family ownership and is now owned by Wesley and Marty Carey Segelke. It still is operated as an active cattle ranch.
