

Steve Standring - I Remember When

Clarence Curtis grew up in Rustic. His playground in the 1920's and 1930's was Red Feather. He would push his bike uphill and coast home. His parents drove a Stanley Steamer from the Fort Collins train depot to Rustic via RFL. They would don Western attire and entertain the guest with bullwhip and rope tricks and precision pistol shooting. Clarence grew up to work for the phone company and installed many of the local lines in the 1940's and 1950's.
